YOU FIND YOURSELF HERE

You find yourself here,
different somehow,
learning to build a life worth living.
You carry it home.

You learn to abandon
what isn't important,
you learn to sit still,
to stay in one place.

You learn to watch over yourself
when there's no one else
to watch over,
and no one to watch over you.

You see yourself reflected;
you learn to love what you see.
You live with yourself,
you live.

You find yourself here,
different somehow,
learning to build a life worth living.
You carry it home.

Dale Trumbore

The text for this piece began as an erasure of an essay about how it feels to experience an artist residency (bit.ly/residencyhome). At an artist residency, you have abundant time. You determine how you spend each day, and you find a routine that serves you. Ideally, when you return home, you bring these new revelations and routines back with you.

You Find Yourself Here is about those rare moments when a single experience reshapes you: you visit a place or meet a new person and learn something about yourself you'll carry with you for the rest of your life.

You Find Yourself Here was commissioned by and is dedicated to the Anaheim High School Chamber Singers (Jeffrey Derus, conductor). This piece was partially composed in residence at Dorland Mountain Arts Colony.

This score can be found at GraphitePublishing.com.
